

The Lowdown in Lobsterville

VOLULMETHREE

MARCH 2005

Liberated Lobster

In a daring rescue attempt, the friends and supporters of Johnny Big Claw liberated their friend from captivity. "I am in awe of the lengths to which they went to help me" stated Johnny, who was once again back home and enjoying life as a free lobster. As you recall, Johnny was captured by some scientists while serving "time" in what the locals thought was a jail cell. However, he was unceremoniously hauled off to a local aquarium, where he was kept under lock and key for "observation". In a clandestine rescue involving late night meetings in dark D.C. alley's and strange black costumes, Johnny's friends rescued the elderly lobster from what many believe was certain death. We here at the Lowdown salute the heroics and dedicated friendship of these loyal lobsters.

Was that a Bunny?

Easter is in the air and the lobster community is ready. Have you noticed the egg painting contest? Those eggs were not just ordinary eggs – they were eggs donated by a local ostrich farm. And have you noticed the large number of bunnies appearing where once there was lobsters? Yes, those crazy crustaceans are at it again. In the costume contest, our recently liberated friend, Johnny Big Claw, took first prize for "Best Bunny" and Klaw Kringle took first prize in the "Most Outrageous Bunny" category. A good time was had by all and, once again, the local lobster population has proven to the humans in the vicinity that they are definitely not normal.

Lobsters Slighted

The lobsters are feeling slighted. In this day and age of gender specific designations, the lobsters have been overlooked. More specifically, we have Bulls for male moose and cows for the female of the species. We have male peacocks, stallions and bucks to go with the female peahens, mares and does. There are roosters and hens, bucks and ewes, geese and ganders, but for the lowly crustacean, there is only the designation "lobster". Now while that is a very worthy name, why have these lowly creatures been shortchanged? It is time for human beings to rectify this problem. Our office on main street, which is open occasionally at the owner's whim, is taking suggestions for the "he" and "she" designation of the species. LET YOUR VOICE BE HEARD!

Claws and Tails

There will be an early morning egg hunt on Easter Sunday. Set your alarms – we start at 11:00 a.m. sharp - and join us for fun and finger steaks.

A special "thank-you" to Louie Lobster for boiling all the Easter eggs and then burying them. We look forward to finding them on Sunday.

HAPPY EASTER