

The Lowdown in Lobsterville

VOLULMEFOUR

APRIL 2005

CONGRATULATIONS are in Order!!!!!!!

The parties continue – Lobsterville is celebrating the job and new home of one of their favorite non-crustaceans. The local population has found reason to party, as if they needed one, in the fact that their favorite electrical engineer supporter is now gainfully employed and housed and, as an additional bonus, he won't be having lobster for his celebratory dinner. Congratulations, Barry!

Beach Volley Ball

The teams have been selected and they are as follows:

Lionel and Little Lindsay - The Skippers - sponsored by a distant banker

Johnny Big Claw and Klaw Kringle - The Klaws - sponsored by Your Friends at the Lowdown

Right Klaw and Clumsy – The Hopefuls - sponsored by the Guatemalan government

Left Klaw and Hook – The Xsters - sponsored by an anonymous Washington corporation

Jumbo and Tiny – The Oddsters – sponsored by themselves

Ringo and Star - The Good Guys – sponsored by a dark, seedy club in Washington, DC

And there you have the teams. We had hoped to have more participants but due to the lack of balls, it is probably a good thing that only these six made the league. Look for team standings in your local edition of the Lowdown. The season officially starts on May 1st.

The Easter Egg Hunt

Once again, the Easter egg hunt was a smashing (no pun intended) success. Fun was had by all and the children followed their noses to Louie's rotten eggs. Rumor has it that they were especially tasty this year. We will take the lobsters' word on that one.

Claws and Tails

Remember the ice cream feed this Saturday night. Bring your favorite squeeze and slurp down on a cone or three. Thanx to the local business district for sponsoring this event.

Just a reminder – those pretty wooden boxes out in the bay – you know, the ones with snacks hanging in them enticing you. They are not fast food restaurants. Do not go near them and avoid them at all costs – otherwise, there may be more finger steaks for everyone else at the next BBQ.

Remember – taxes are due April 15th. So enjoy yourself – laugh at the humans as they stroll down the dock.
