

The Lowdown in Lobsterville

VOLULME SIX

MAY 2005

HAPPY MOTHERS' DAY

Since we, as lobster's, do not know who our mother is, on this special day for mothers, we honor all egg-bearing lobsters as anyone of them could be our mom. So to all you special lobsters, Happy Mother's Day. Remember, the local Lobster Queen (LQ) is offering a free crab shake to each of you who stops by. Enjoy your special day!!!

POLITICS TODAY

In this issue, we introduce you to the candidates for the much coveted job of garbage collector. Bearing in mind that one never knows what kind of goodies might be found in another's trash, this campaign is sure to be a good one. The first candidate is Dexter Lobster. Dexter's family has long been in the garbage business – and Dexter hopes to continue the tradition of scavenging, I mean collecting. Dexter's family has lived in Lobsterville for many years and many of us watched Dexter grow up. If this helps or hinders him is yet to be seen. The other candidate is also a longtime Lobsterville resident – Frank Lobster. Old timers will remember that Frank's family ran a finger steak stand down by Lobster Sands in the early days when that beach was first coming into popularity. More recently, Dexter has been developing a secret sauce for marinating cod fillets – the new product is due to be released two weeks before the election. We shall see what effect this has on the outcome of this important election.

Keep watching for the profiles on future candidates.

CRANK PHONE CALLS

Local authorities have been investigating a series of crank calls that various residents of Lobsterville have been receiving. You will recall that in the last issue of the Lowdown, we reported that a number of calls had been received by local residents. The authorities have advised that these calls are, indeed, the work of professionals. It seems that the callers start out by presenting themselves as individuals taking a political survey. But the call quickly digresses into threats about voting for certain individuals. So far no specific candidates have been mentioned but it leads one to wonder if a dirty politician is involved in fear tactics. The only lead the authorities have thus far is that the calls are originating in Washington, D.C. Keep reading – as soon as further information is available, we will pass it on to you.

CLAWS AND TAILS

This weekend, Lobster d'Fleur will be hosting a BBQ in honor of mothers of every species. As you all remember, Lobster d'Fleur attended a course in culinary BBQ techniques at the Atlantic Coast School of Culinary Delights earlier this year. We are looking forward to sampling his cuisine. A special thank you to the local businesses for donating the food for this BBQ – and no, it is not finger steaks, supplies on that culinary delight are running low.

With the summer season just around the corner, please join us at the local LDW (Lobsters of Domestic Wars) Hall for a fashion show. Featured will be the latest fashions in swim wear from Paris and England). This promises to be an entertaining event – we hope to see you there.
